A civil celebrant-applicant shall not be authorized to solemnize marriages or civil unions until the application for certification is approved and a certificate received from the Department of State.

A civil celebrant who has received a certification may have that certification revoked, through a hearing before an administrative law judge, if determined that any information provided in the celebrant's application was inaccurate or otherwise did not comply with the certification requirements set forth in New Jersey's laws. A civil celebrant subject to a revocation hearing before an administrative law judge or any appeal thereof shall not be authorized to solemnize marriages or civil unions, and shall only again be authorized to do so if a final determination is made permitting the civil celebrant to retain the certification.
