State Comptroller Launches Sandy Transparency Website

The Office of the State Comptroller announced today that it has launched a new website designed to allow the public to track state contracts and expenditures involving federal Sandy-related funding.

The website was created under the requirements of Executive Order No. 125, signed by Governor Chris Christie last month.

The website contains information such as copies of the Sandy-related contracts that the state has entered into, vendor information and details about available federal funding. Additional information will be added to the website once it becomes available, including a "funds tracker" that will enable the public to view how the state has allocated its Sandy funding.

"We are pleased that we were able to get this information posted quickly for the public to inspect," State Comptroller Matthew Boxer stated. "This is just a first step in the Sandy transparency effort and we'll continue to add to the website in the coming days and weeks."

The website can be found at <http://nj.gov/comptroller/sandytransparency>.

Boxer thanked the state's Office of Information Technology and the Governor's Office of Recovery and Rebuilding for their assistance with launching the site.
