

TENTATIVE NEW JERSEY 2014-15 MIGRATORY BIRD SEASON DATES SET

The New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection's Division of Fish and Wildlife (Division) and Fish and Game Council proposed tentative 2014-15 migratory bird hunting season dates at their June 10 meeting.

The Division and Fish and Game Council are responsible for adopting migratory bird seasons within the frameworks prescribed in the Code of Federal Regulations promulgated by the U.S. Department of the Interior, Fish and Wildlife Service (Service).

The status of migratory birds is annually measured through the completion of numerous, continent-wide population monitoring surveys. Following review of these survey results and with consultation with the four Flyway Councils, hunting season frameworks for migratory birds are annually promulgated by the Service. Hunting season frameworks include season length, bag limits, and outside opening and closing dates for a particular season.

The tentative 2014-15 New Jersey migratory bird hunting season dates and bag limits follow. Although these regulation selections are expected to be within the frameworks proposed by the Service, they will not be formally finalized through the Federal Register process until the conclusion of the public comment period in late summer. This year's season selections are similar to last year. Season dates for the Regular Canada goose season (November to January period) are yet to be determined pending results of surveys of Atlantic Population Canada geese in northern Quebec that are conducted in June-July. Also, there is uncertainty at this time whether Atlantic brant season length will be 30 or 50 days and will be contingent on conditions on arctic breeding grounds this summer. Scenarios for both 30 and 50 day brant seasons are included.

The Migratory Bird Regulations will be available on the Division's web site by August and paper copies will be available at Division offices, license agents and sporting goods stores throughout the state in September.
