PROGRAM:

Lindenwold is a comprehensive school district with a new high school built in 2001. The Middle School serves grades 5 through 8, and two elementary schools house preschool through 4th grade. All instructional classrooms district wide have interactive whiteboards. Students have access to laptops and a wide array of instructional technologies, including iPods for student podcasts. Lindenwold High School houses a fully-functioning television studio which provides community telecasts, giving students the opportunity to experience all aspects of television production right in the school. The high school also offers dual-credit programs in conjunction with Camden County College.
