CONSUMER ALERT

Ford Recalls Vehicles for a Faulty Cruise Control Deactivation Switch

Dear Consumer:

On October 13, 2009, The National Highway Traffic & Safety Administration (NHTSA) posted an alert on its website to Ford owners about a potential problem with the cruise control deactivation switch. The faulty switch can leak hydraulic fluid, overheat and then burn, potentially causing vehicle fires even with the ignition turned off.

If your vehicle is affected, NHTSA urges you to have it repaired as soon as possible. For information on this and for a list of affected vehicles, consumers are asked to visit the NHTSA website at <http://www.nhtsa.gov>. Click on the link to the "NHTSA press room" to view the October 13th press release.

Sincerely,

The New Jersey Lemon Law Unit
