'Perfect Storm' allows Jersey Guard to rise to occasion

By Sgt. Wayne Woolley
DMAVA Public Affairs Specialist

When he was activated to respond to the post-Christmas blizzard of 2010, New Jersey Army National Guard Spc. Andy DeLeon was afraid there would be no action.

It turned out there was plenty.

In fact, DeLeon and his fellow Soldiers may have ended up saving some lives.

In the early morning hours of Dec. 28, DeLeon and Pfc. Brian Francione found themselves on Route 18 in Monmouth County, forcing their Humvee through five-foot snowdrifts to respond to reports of trapped motorists.

They stumbled across a scene almost from a movie. Scores of vehicles nearly buried in snow. A helicopter hovered overhead, sweeping a spotlight to cut through the darkness and the near whiteout conditions caused by howling winds.

"We started finding people in some of those cars," DeLeon said. "One guy had run out of gas and was getting really cold. In another car, we found two guys who had been driving in different cars and just decided to stay in one to save gas."

Most had been stuck for hours. As DeLeon and Francione worked, they saw another vehicle on the opposite side of the highway. They tried to force the Humvee across the median, but without any luck. They made their way across on foot, through waist-high snow.

The Soldiers reached the van and found Jessica Furlani, a nurse who had been making her way to her shift at a local hospital. She had been stuck in her car for 23 hours.

They helped Furlani out of her vehicle, gave her a ride to the Tinton Falls police station and then onto a makeshift shelter that had been set up at the AMC Theater at the Monmouth Mall.

She was among five people the Soldiers rescued that morning.

"It was amazing how all these people kept going that long. I'm sure that was something they didn't expect," said DeLeon said.

In all, nearly a dozen Soldiers responded to the storm, assisting more than a dozen motorists.

DeLeon, a Signal specialist assigned to the 50th Infantry Brigade Combat Team Headquarters, said his duty during the storm was the most gratifying he's had in his two years in uniform.

"It was an experience I won't forget. I'm glad I went ahead and took the duty," he said. "It was a good feeling to help people. You could see the joy on people's faces when we got to them."

Scholarships money for college-bound

Youth Challenge cadets

Five New Jersey Youth Challenge Academy graduates will have a financial head start on furthering their education after graduating from the program in April.

That's thanks to the National Guard Youth Foundation, which has arranged for the award of five $1,000 scholarships to the program, according to Director Victoria Ragucci.

The individual scholarships donors are: Jefferies & Company, Attain, and WWE. The two remaining scholarships are funded directly by the National Guard Youth Foundation.

New rollover trainers and cost Savings bound for JT2DC

Spc. Saul Rosa, 444th MPAD

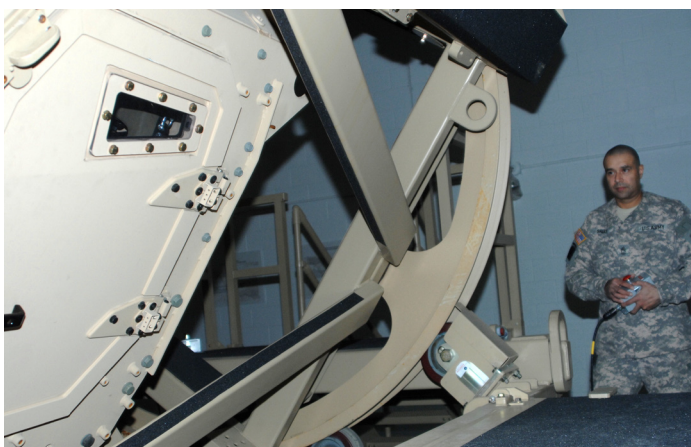

A new Mine Resistant Armor Protected Vehicle Egress Trainer (MET) has been brought to the Joint Base to benefit service members training through a collaborative cost-saving effort by the Joint Training and Training Development Center (JT2DC) and the training and mobilization site.

Staging the MET in National Guard Bureau's JT2DC offers many benefits to the service members who use the trainer and is a cost-effective alternative for training and mobilization missions.

"I need to get the best training available for my soldiers and to get the soldiers to know their training will save their lives and their friends," said New Jersey Army National Guard Master Sgt. Rene Sales, a senior trainer at the JT2DC.

Military reservists asked to Nominate top bosses

Time is running out for Guard and Reserve service members and their families are encouraged to nominate employers who have provided exceptional support of military employees. Nominations are being accepted at www.FreedomAward.mil through January 17, 2011.

The Secretary of Defense Employer Support Freedom Award is the highest recognition given by the U.S. Government to employers for the outstanding support of their employees serving in the Guard and Reserve.

The 2011 recipients will be announced in the spring and honored in Washington, D.C. at the 16th annual Secretary of Defense Employer Support Freedom Award ceremony on September 22, 2011. Recipients of the 2010 Freedom Award met privately with Vice President Joe Biden and Secretary of Defense Robert Gates while in Washington, D.C. Under Secretary of Defense, Chief Financial Officer Robert Hale and Assistant Secretary of Defense for Reserve Affairs Dennis McCarthy presented the awards at a ceremony attended by members of Congress, senior military officials, business leaders and the Guard and Reserve service members who nominated the award recipients.

Almost one-half of the U.S. military is comprised of the Guard and Reserve. The Department of Defense shares these citizen warriors with their civilian employers, many of whom provide significant support to their employees who serve in the Guard and Reserve.

The Freedom Award was instituted in 1996 under the auspices of ESGR to recognize exceptional support from the employer community. ESGR is a Department of Defense agency established in 1972 whose mission is to develop and promote employer support for Guard and Reserve service by advocating relevant initiatives, recognizing outstanding support, increasing awareness of applicable laws, and resolving conflict between employers and service members. For questions regarding the Freedom Award nomination process, please visit www.FreedomAward.mil or contact Beth Sherman, ESGR Public Affairs, at 703-696-1171, ext. 539 or by email at ESGR-PA@osd.mil.

JT2DC, Joint Base team up for training, cost savings

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1 Besides the great training environment JT2DC offers, it's also a cost-effective and green solution to the escalating cost of training the nation's war fighter.

"Cost saving's was a minimum of $200,000 for a pad that would have placed the system in the open air in the winter, spring, summer and fall," said Robert Stodnick, an Army Support Activity Training Support officer. "If we had to construct a building it would have been in excess of $400,000," he added.

The cost to stage the MET at the training development center was nearly $13,000.

The MET's size and weight requires certain conditions to be met in order for it to be operated safely. It is required that the surface the device is on can hold 33,000 pounds, a power supply and it is recommended that either shade or air-conditioning is provided for the heat in the summer months.

The MET itself offers a realistic simulation to develop the proper skills and confidence in all service members' ability to safely egress from an overturned vehicle and survive on a battlefield. The training center offers a unique training environment for the MET and service members, because of its convoy layout with other Humvee Egress Assistance Trainers (HEAT). This combination allows trainers to practice advance egress scenarios and incorporate battle drills and medical evacuation training by mixing up which vehicle will flip.

The MET was delivered to JT2DC earlier this year. More than 100 Soldiers have been trained so far.
