108th Wing provides once-in-a-lifetime experience to local high school children

Having never seen the inside of a KC-135 Stratotanker, cadets Frank Gradzki and Vincent Giersch were delighted to be able to sit in the jump seat of the aircraft during the take-off and landing of an air refueling mission by the crew of the 108th Wing.

"I saw my house and my old middle school," said Giersch.

"It was awesome to see how the pilots maneuver the plane and how they interact in the cockpit," said Gradzki.

Gradzki and Giersch were among the 19 Air Force Junior ROTC cadets from Southern Regional High School in Manahawkin, N.J., that were provided with an opportunity to experience an orientation flight on Jan. 18, at Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst.

The orientation flight was coordinated by the 108th Wing's public affair officer, Capt. April Doolittle.

"The purpose of these flights is to motivate and familiarize Air Force JROTC cadets with the role and missions of the 108th Wing," said Doolittle.

This event introduces the young cadets to general aviation and military opportunities through hands-on interaction with an aircraft, equipment and personnel.

In addition, these flights are an excellent recruiting tool for the New Jersey Air National Guard and possibly the Air Force's active duty component.

After receiving a safety briefing from the flight crew and watching a video on emergency evacuation procedures, Cadets were able to observe the flight and refueling of a KC-10 Extender over the Atlantic Ocean.

Ordnance Corps top NCO visits New Jersey Guardsmen at JB MDL

By Sgt. 1st Class Ruben Ortiz, Jr., quality assurance NCO

The Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst community was visited by Command Sgt. Maj. Sultan Muhammad, regimental command sergeant major of the Ordnance Corps, and Sgt. Maj. Randall Boss, Army National Guard and Reserve Component Liaison, on Wednesday, Jan. 11, here.

The visit highlights the growing importance of units located at JB MDL and the future role they can provide supporting The One Army School System.

One of the units visited by Muhammad and Boss was the New Jersey National Guard Regional Training Site-Maintenance facility located at the Joint Training and Training Development Center here. Meeting with the post's distinguished visitors were Command Sgt. Maj. Timothy Marvian, regimental command sergeant major for the 254th Regiment; Sgt. Maj. Alexandro Estrada, operations sergeant major for the 42nd Regional Support Group; Capt. Eric Sproesser, senior instructor and Master Sgt. David Porter, chief instructor for the RTS-M.

The JT2DC houses, within its honeycombed training complex, the platform for noncommissioned officer education system, maintenance sustainment and military occupation skill's qualification training, which RTS-M provides.

Course curriculum, facility additions and future NCOES training were some of the topics discussed while touring
