Dear Esther,

To hear that story about what they put you and your family and friends through just made me cry.

The one thing about the play was that there was a lot of emotional parts and then on the second part of the play the younger Esther said tell them what you did in the soup. Everyone laughed but then it started getting emotional.

Every time I look at my baby brother and my family I want to cry because how grateful I am to live here and everything changed.

Every night before I go to bed I think of what you ate and think how you survived without that much food.

♡ I hope all is good for you! ♡

♡ P.S. Please Write Back! ♡

Love,
Kelly Meade
