INTRODUCTION

During the 2018 production year, 863 projects were filmed throughout New Jersey. These include 50 feature films, 1 mini-series, 123 television series and specials, 101 music videos, 187 industrial, documentary, educational and short films, 369 commercials and stills and 32 web programs and series.

This production work generated $121,416,470 for the New Jersey economy.

Since 1978, the New Jersey Motion Picture and Television Commission's inaugural year, the Commission has attracted a grand total of 24,171 projects to the Garden State, enhancing the local economy by over $2.3 billion.

Michael E. Uslan, Chairman

CHAIRMAN'S MESSAGE

2018 was a milestone year for New Jersey's film and television industry. It marked the 40th anniversary of the New Jersey Motion Picture and Television Commission, and four decades of extensive motion picture and television production in the state. More importantly, 2018 saw the passage of the Garden State Film and Digital Media Jobs Act by the state legislature, signed into law on July 3, 2018, which will prove to be a complete game changer for our film and television industry. This crucial incentive has instantly transformed New Jersey into one of the country's most popular sites for production work.

Now, the state truly has it all - a breathtaking variety of locations, a talent pool second to none, outstanding cooperation from our cities and towns, and tremendous convenience to the New York City and Philadelphia metropolitan areas. A competitive tax credit program, promised and delivered by Governor Phil Murphy, allows us to fully compete not only with New York, Connecticut and Pennsylvania but also with states across the country and countries across the globe.

Studios, networks and independent companies are not merely interested in filming in New Jersey but clamoring to do so.

Days after the incentive became available, location scouts began to descend upon our cities and towns and within weeks, major motion pictures and television programs were shooting in New Jersey once again. Better yet, preparations began on large scale projects scheduled to film throughout 2019 and beyond. As this report evidences, year-to-year production revenue increased 81% after the state hosted just a few of these projects in 2018. A full year's worth of projects produced under the tax credit will yield annual revenue figures many times greater than those the state has reported at any time in the Commission's history. This translates to the enhancement of the local economy by hundreds of millions of dollars, and the creation of thousands of full and part-time jobs for our residents.

We are delighted to welcome filmmakers back to the state where filmmaking began, and look forward to explosive growth in New Jersey's production industry. Once again, motion picture history is being made here.

Steven Gorelick, Executive Director

DIRECTOR'S REPORT

Consider it a taste of things to come. New Jersey's tax credit program only became available in the latter half of 2018, meaning that projects using the incentive started to gear up over the summer and began filming in the fall and early winter. Within this compressed timeframe, New Jersey managed to attract a few choice productions.

The first of these, "The Enemy Within," is a mid-season television series airing on NBC. This 13 episode program follows an FBI agent who enlists the services of a notorious, convicted American traitor to help capture a foreign spy. Although much of the show was filmed on location, standing sets were built at the Izod Center in East Rutherford, leased by NBC for the duration of the season. Thus, a vacant arena was transformed into a bustling studio teeming with activity and crew members.

"The Enemy Within" presents a microcosmic example of the ways in which film and television production enriches the state. The New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority was able to negotiate a one year lease, subsequently renewed for another year, as the predominantly unused building became a significant source of revenue. Hundreds of New Jerseyans were hired as crew members on the production, industry professionals who were previously forced to find employment in other states. They were thankful and elated to find work at home, obviating the need to commute several hours each day or temporarily relocate to another area of the country. Local businesses - hardware and lumber stores, supermarkets, restaurants, dry cleaners, gas stations, stationary suppliers, and more - all benefitted from the presence of the NBC crew. Locations were rented throughout the northeastern New Jersey area, and hundreds of extras were hired. The estimated total economic impact to New Jersey from this one television series alone is expected to approach $50 million.

Warner Bros. filmed major sequences for the highly anticipated feature film "Joker," starring Joaquin Phoenix and Robert De Niro, in Newark and Jersey City from September to November. The studio spared no expense to transform Market Street in Newark into a stylized version of Gotham City, and many business owners were well paid for the use of their storefronts. Hundreds of extras from the area were cast in complex scenes shot in both Newark and Jersey City, area residents were hired as production assistants, off-duty police were employed, and food, equipment and supplies were procured locally.

Both production companies demonstrated their generosity in different ways. NBC/Universal sponsored two Production Assistant Bootcamps, free of charge, in Jersey City and Paterson. Recent college graduates were enrolled, the majority of them minorities and women. Upon completion of the intensive course, they were placed on a "hot list"⁴⁵ and many found employment on major productions almost immediately. Warner Bros. kindly contributed $10,000 to the Landmark Loews Jersey Theater in Jersey City, and spent $70,000 to upgrade the exterior and marquee. This is the kind of added value these productions bring to our cities and towns.

Lastly the intangible benefits to hosting motion pictures and television programs cannot be underestimated. The state receives invaluable exposure when our localities appear on motion picture and television screens throughout the world. This type of publicity enhances the perception that New Jersey is a highly desirable place to live, work and vacation.

An active New Jersey film and television industry contributes to the state in many different ways, and we look forward to the huge influx of production coming our way in the months and years ahead.
