Program Summary

A panel of former federal judicial clerks will provide an overview of litigation before the U.S. Supreme Court. The presenters (one of whom is slated to argue New York v. New Jersey before the Court on March 1) will share their insights about Supreme Court practice, including how the Court chooses which cases to hear from the roughly 5,000-6,000 petitions for certiorari it receives, how it acts on emergency motions (sometimes called “the shadow docket”), and what briefing and argument look like in the 60-70 cases the Court hears argument on each year. The presenters will also discuss the briefs, arguments, and opinions in some major civil and criminal cases pending before or recently decided by the Supreme Court this Term.
